

I'm writing to express my strong opposition to the proposal to allow bears to be hunted by air. This proposal seems like nothing more than a thinly veiled attempt to allow rich hunters to murder bears for a thrill, rather than a genuine attempt to manage caribou herds. Nature has thrived for millennia without human intervention and it's arrogant to think that it needs our help. Alaska is home to some of the most majestic animals in the United States and to see you lobbying for the ability to murder them is truly disgraceful. Surely, the people of Alaska can come up with a less destructive way of protecting the herds.
